

APPLICATION - National Premises Identification Number

The National Animal Identification System (NAIS) is a program intended to identify specific animals in the United States and record their movement over their lifespan. It is being developed by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) and State agencies - in cooperation with industry - to enable 48-hour traceback of the movements of any diseased or exposed animal. This will assist in rapid disease containment and maximum protection of America's animals.

The first phase of the program seeks to identify properties (premises) where animals are born, managed, marketed, or exhibited. The California Department of Food and Agriculture (CDFA) is facilitating the process to obtain National Premises Identification Numbers (NPIN) for premises involved in livestock production or commerce in California. Participation in the program is voluntary.

Two steps (Page 1 and Page 2) are necessary to receive an NPIN:

STEP 1 (Page 1) Create an "account" with the California Department of Food and Agriculture (CDFA) by providing basic information about your business as it applies to livestock and poultry. You can mail or fax the completed form to CDFA or enter the information on CDFA Web site (www.californiaid.org). For more information call 866-325-5681

STEP 2 (Page 2) Provide the physical address for each distinct premises (premises-location), where an activity (i.e. beef ranch, saleyard, clinic, poultry ranch, etc.) takes place. You must also provide contact information for each premises (name, phone number, etc). Under your account, you may obtain a separate NPIN for each location where livestock production or commerce occurs. Indicate if the premises has more than one type of operation (i.e. a poultry farm with an egg processing operation, etc.). Where applicable, record the different type of animals on the property (cattle, pigs, sheep, etc). Use a new Page 2 for each additional premises. Page 2 may also be submitted to update property information applicable to any section of the form.
